Seagulls at the Malta Migration Museum

Book launch of Adrian Grima's poems translated into French

On Friday, 30th November, at 6.30pm, at the Malta Migration Museum, Dar I-Emigrant, in Valletta, next to the Upper Barrakka Gardens, the Fondation de Malte is launching a book of poems in Maltese by Adrian Grima translated into French by Paris-based cultural operator and writer Elizabeth Grech, called Ici arrivent les mouettes / Hawn Jidhol il-Gawwi. Entrance is free and everyone is welcome to attend. The launch will be followed by a reception.

The book is a bilingual collection of 50 poems, some of which are being published here for the first time, written over a span of 20 years, from It-Trumbettier (1999) to Denb il-Vleġġa/La coda della freccia (Lushir, Italy, 2011).

The translations are by Elizabeth Grech, who studied anthropology at the University of Malta and Aix-en-Provence, and has now been living in France since 1999. As part of her work at the Fondation René Seydoux pour le monde méditerranéen in Paris, Elizabeth Grech promotes literature in the Mediterranean and has taken part in numerous conferences and research projects in the region. The French writers Mohammed El Amraoui and Philippe Parizot-Clerico (who wrote the preface to this collection) collaborated with Elizabeth Grech on this literary translation project.

The book launch will be an event in itself with readings in Maltese by Adrian Grima, accompanied by Samwel Grima on the bass guitar, readings in French by Elizabeth Grech, and the projection of photos by Philippe Parizot-Clerico and Elizabeth Grech (who took the photo that appears on the cover of the book designed by the Glasgow-based artist Marco Scerri).
